

Turbulence

By Wes Reeves

The wind turbines
out on the flat
fade in the cover
of the coming of the storm.

The blades ease off
in artful adagio,
slower, slower,
and stop.

The freight train,
with its war bonnet,
screams through
because it must.